FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

Global economic performance was divergent in December 2025, reflecting contrasting central bank policies and uneven growth across major regions. In the United States, the Fed cut its benchmark rate by 25 basis points (bps) to 3.5–3.75%, citing slower job creation and rising unemployment. Treasury yields moved unevenly, with the 10-year treasury yields higher by 13.75 bps to 4.13% and the 2-year treasury yields rising 4 bps to 3.50%, as market reacted to hawkish signals from Fed officials, including Williams' comments that there is no urgency to cut rates further. The Fed also resumed Treasury bill purchases to rebuild bank reserves to support liquidity. US growth is projected to stabilise in 2026 as we expect global economic growth to moderate with the world's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) expanding at 2.8%. Meanwhile, Bank of Japan raised short-term rates to 0.75%, its highest since 1995, amid steady inflation and wage growth. In contrast, China maintained moderately loose policy to support credit, consumption, and its 5% growth target. Major economies ended the year with varying policy stances and growth signals across regions.

Domestically, Malaysia's economy remained resilience, reflected across key sectors. Domestic-oriented manufacturing eased to 4.9%, supported by growth in food & beverage and pharmaceuticals, offsetting weakness in motor vehicles. Export-oriented clusters strengthened to 7.2%, led by Electrical & Electronics and Machinery & Equipment. Headline inflation edged up to 1.4%, while core inflation stayed at 2.2%. In the bond market, 10-year Malaysian Government Securities (MGS) yields rose by 9.90 bps to 3.814% likely due to lower trading volume. With resilient growth, low and stable inflation rate, Bank Negara Malaysia is expected to maintain its Overnight Policy Rate at the level of 2.75% for now. Overall, steady fundamentals and a resilient currency underpin the domestic economy and performance of the local bonds.
