FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The Federal Reserve delivered its second 25 basis points (bps) rate cut in its Federal Open Market Committee meeting, lowering the federal funds rate to 3.75%–4.00% and announcing plans to end active balance-sheet reductions from 1 December to support financial system liquidity. Following the decision, the 10-year Treasury yield rose about 9bps to 4.08% as expectations of another cut was “not a foregone conclusion” as mentioned by Jerome Powell. Meanwhile, the European Central Bank kept rates steady, citing modest resilience in Eurozone activity. Overall, diverging policy paths and cautious investor sentiment continued to influence volatility across global bond and foreign exchange markets. Global markets were seen navigating diverging central bank signals and ongoing uncertainties in October.

In Malaysia, offshore holdings of Malaysian debt securities fell in October after a short reprieve declining to 20.6% with net outflows of RM6.4 billion in September. Auction results were underwhelming, as the RM3 billion reissuance of 30-year Malaysian Government Securities (MGS) due July 2055 drew a relatively modest bid-to-cover ratio of 1.38 times. The auction results were one of lowest of any government bond auction since October 2023 as investors adopted a more cautious stance amid global uncertainties and with the impending reduction of Malaysian bonds' weighting in a major global emerging market index. Malaysia's domestic economy remained stable. Headline inflation in September was moderate at 1.5%, unemployment stayed steady at 3.0% and employment growth remained sustained. Bank Negara Malaysia maintained Overnight Policy Rate at 3.00%, focusing on supporting growth despite ongoing U.S.–China trade tensions.
