FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The US economy grew at an annualised 2.0% in Q1 2026, though the headline figure masked underlying weakness as consumer spending slowed and a surge in imports dragged on overall growth. The unemployment rate edged down to 4.3%, but the improvement was illusory as total employment fell by 64,000 and the labour force shrank by 396,000, pushing the participation rate to 61.9%. Inflation surged to 3.3% in March, driven by a 10.9% spike in energy costs as the Iran war sent gasoline prices soaring 21.2% in one month. US Treasury yields rose, with the 10-year consolidating near 4.4% and the 30-Year briefly touching 5% as oil prices peaked at USD126 per barrel. This reinforced the higher-for-longer narrative with markets having largely pricing out Federal Reserve ("Fed") cuts through 2026. In April, Fed held rates unchanged at 3.50%–3.75%.

Malaysia's economy by contrast remained resilient in Q1 2026, with advance Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth estimated at 6.3%. Malaysia's Producer Price Index (PPI) turned positive for the first time since February 2025 rebounding to 1.1%, signalling building upstream cost pressures even as Consumer Price Index (CPI) is projected at 2.1%. This resilience was further reinforced by S&P's positive rating outlook, providing an additional sentiment anchor. Malaysian Government Securities (MGS) yields broadly rallied, with the 10-Year declined 8 basis points (bps) to 3.56% and the 5-Year yield at 3.35% (-11 bps), supported by a firmer ringgit and sustained foreign inflows that lifted non-resident MGS holdings to 21.5%. Domestic economic remained well supported by liquidity, total money supply (M3) was at 22-month high of 5.5% and at a loan growth of 5.4%. Bank Negara is expected to hold the Overnight Policy Rate (OPR) at 2.75% throughout 2026.
