FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

Global equity markets experienced a broad-based sell-off in March 2026, as escalating geopolitical tensions in the Middle East triggered a sharp energy shock and a repricing of global growth expectations. U.S. markets declined sharply, with the Dow Jones falling 5.4%, the Nasdaq declining 4.8%, and the S&P 500 dropping 5.1%. The primary catalyst was the rapid escalation of the U.S.–Israel conflict with Iran, which led to the effective shutdown of the Strait of Hormuz—a critical artery for approximately 20% of global seaborne oil supply. This disruption caused Brent crude prices to surge 63.3% to $118.4 per barrel, reigniting stagflation fears as U.S. gasoline prices rose above $4 per gallon. While the IEA announced a record release of 400 million barrels from strategic reserves to stabilize markets, the Dollar Index strengthened by 2.4% amid the uncertainty. However, the outlook improved following an April 8 ceasefire agreement, where the U.S. and Iran established a two-week window to reopen the Strait. Given persistent geopolitical and policy uncertainty, market volatility is likely to remain elevated; with U.S. equity valuations remaining stretched at roughly one standard deviation above historical averages, the market is highly sensitive to further shocks. Strategically, we will continue to hold Inflation Hedging theme ETFs, primarily commodity-focused exposures, to enhance portfolio diversification and improve resilience.
