FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

US equities extended their rally in September, supported by resilient earnings, strong AI-driven demand, and expectations of further monetary easing. The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 1.9%, the S&P 500 gained 3.5%, and the Nasdaq Composite surged 5.6%.

The Federal Reserve cut interest rates by 25 basis points—its first since December 2024—marking the start of a new easing cycle amid signs of a softening labour market and moderating inflation. The U.S. Labor Department later revised down 12 months of job data by 911,000, the largest downward adjustment since 2009, reinforcing the case for easier policy.

Revised GDP data showed the economy expanded at an annualized 3.8% in Q2 2025, up from 3.3%, underscoring resilience despite slower hiring. Meanwhile, President Trump's new tariffs—100% on pharmaceuticals, 50% on furniture, and 25% on heavy trucks—added to trade uncertainty.

In commodities, Brent crude oil slipped 1.6% to USD 67.0/barrel on rising inventories, while the Dollar Index was little changed at 97.77.

However, the U.S. government shutdown has reintroduced fiscal and political uncertainty, with economists estimating a $7–15 billion weekly hit to GDP. While abundant liquidity continues to support equities, valuations now stand near two standard deviations above historical averages, suggesting limited upside as investors weigh policy support against growth risks.

Strategically, we continue to focus on Innovation (AI, semiconductors, automation) themed ETFs, which offer exposure to structural growth trends within a still-liquid but increasingly selective market environment.
